CHATEAU-THIERRY

THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND THREW EVERYTHING THEY HAD AGAINST THE ALLIES IN JULY 1918, DURING THE DRIVE BACK TO CHATEAU-THIERRY. THERE THE AMERICANS CAME INTO THE TRENCHES—INEXPERIENCED BUT WILLING!

THE AMERICAN TROOPS WHO FOUGHT IN THE TRENCHES AT CHATEAU-THIERRY WERE POORLY TRAINED--BUT IT WAS A MIRACLE THAT THEY WERE THERE AT ALL! ON APRIL 6, 1917 WE WERE WOEFULLY UNPREPARED TO FIGHT...

CONGRESS HAS EMPOWERED ME TO DECLARE THAT A STATE OF WAR EXISTS BETWEEN THIS NATION AND GERMANY! HOW LONG WILL IT TAKE TO LAND TROOPS IN FRANCE?

WE'VE GOT TO GET THEM IN UNIFORM, TRAIN THEM, AND SHIP THEM THROUGH SUB-INFESTED WATERS, MR. PRESIDENT! IT WILL TAKE TIME...

BATTLEFIELD ACTION

IT DID TAKE TIME—BUT NOT AS LONG AS EXPECTED! OUR MEN LOST NO TIME IN VOLUNTEERING...

YOU'RE IN THE ARMY NOW! STAND UP STRAIGHT—PULL IN YOUR STOMACHS/ 'TENSHUN!

THERE WASN'T TIME FOR EFFICIENT TRAINING PROGRAMS... THE ALLIES WERE STAGGERING UNDER REPEATED GERMAN ATTACKS!

IT'LL BE OVER BEFORE WE GET TO FIGHT!

NO, IT WON'T! WE'LL GET OUR CHANCE, BARNEY! THEY'LL SHIP US SOON!

OUR TROOP SHIPS STEAMED THROUGH THE SUBMARINE INFESTED WATERS TO CARRY TWO MILLION AMERICANS "OVER THERE"...

I HEAR THE GERMANS ARE THE BEST SOLDIERS IN THE WORLD O'TOOLE! ONE OF THE BOYS SAYS HE HEARD WE WON'T STAND A CHANCE AGAINST THEM!

THE ENGLISH LICKED 'EM IN A FEW BATTLES DIDN'T THEY? IF THE LIMESYS DID IT WE CAN DO IT TWICE AS GOOD! REMEMBER THAT!

BATTLEFIELD ACTION

THE AMERICAN TROOPS ARRIVED IN THE NICK OF TIME... VON LUDENDORFF WAS SMASHING THE ALLIED TROOPS...

WE WILL BE IN THE STREETS OF PARIS BY THE END OF JULY! THE FRENCH ARE PANICKY, FLEEING PARIS FOR THEIR LIVES!

THE CRACK GERMAN TROOPS ROLLED ON... AND ON TILL THEY REACHED CHATEAU-THIERRY... THERE...

MY TROOPS WILL ARRIVE TONIGHT!

YOUR AMERICAN TROOPS AREN'T COMBAT EXPERIENCED... BUT WE'VE GOT TO USE THEM!

SILENTLY THE AMERICAN TROOPS MOVED UP THROUGH THE COMMUNICATION TRENCHES!

The Way Back

The battle of production and supply, designed to build a foundation to support unprecedented Allied air and naval power, was won during 1942 and 1943, while at the same time, Japanese air and naval power greatly diminished. Hawaii, the most important naval base in the Pacific had become a training center and staging area for U.S. troops, and also one of the supply bases we needed. In 1944, the strategic offensive against Japan began.

Following the invasion of the Gilberts in late 1943, U.S. forces prepared for an assault in the western Marshalls. The principal objective were Kwajalein and Eniwetok Atolls. According to plans for the assault on the western Marshalls, a Marine division was to seize the northern half of the Kwajalein Atoll, principally the islands of Roi and Namur. Army ground forces units were to capture the southern half of the Atoll, including the island of Kwajalein, and to occupy Majuro Island, one of the finest naval anchorages west of Pearl Harbor.

Supporting naval and air bombardment and artillery fire were brought to bear on the selected landing beaches of Kwajalein and Roi Islands of Kwajalein Atoll. Unopposed landings were made on both islands on February 1, 1944, with a slight resistance developing after advance was made inland. Six days after the main landings, all the islands of the Kwajalein Atoll were in U.S. hands and Majuro had been occupied.

On February 17, landings were made on the islands of Eniwetok Atoll. Resistance was wiped out five days later. A two days strike against Truk, on February 16 and 17, were executed by a large carrier force to screen the assault of the Eniwetok Atoll and to test the strength of the Japanese base there. Although the strong enemy inland bases in the eastern Marshalls were bypassed, the air forces maintained continual attacks on them throughout the year. Conquest of the western Marshalls provided air bases and a new forward fleet base in the Pacific.

The Mariana Islands, the next objective in the Central Pacific differ from the coral atolls of the Marshalls and Gilberts. The individual islands are much larger. The distinguishing terrain features are precipitous coast lines, high hills, and deep ravines. Plans were made, ships and supplies collected, and the troops given special training for the invasion. Meanwhile Japanese air and ground reinforcements poured into the Central Pacific.

An intense air offense against enemy installations in the Marianas began on June 11, 1944. And a naval bombardment of Saipan began on the 13th, two days before the landings on the 15th. Opposition was heavy at first. But by the 25th, U.S. troops, supported by tanks, heavy artillery, renewed naval gunfire, and aerial bombardment, drove the enemy from the high ground on the Central part of the island. Again advances were slow and difficult with heavy troop losses. On July 9, the mission was completed except for mopping-up operations which continued for nearly two months.

On the morning of July 24, an attack was made on Tinian, supported by artillery on Saipan. Enemy resistance, for the first two days, increased when high ground was reached in the central part of the island. The entire island was overrun by August 1. Meanwhile, Guam had been invaded on July 21 by U.S. forces in two separate landings. This invasion was preceded by a thirteen day aerial and naval softening-up process. The two beach heads were joined after three days of fighting. The troops, greatly hampered by undergrowth, concentrated on the high ground in the northern part of the island. Except for resistance from small scattered Japanese, we were in command of the island by August 10.

A force of nearly 800 ships from the Guadalcanal area sailed for the Palau Islands, the next hop in the Central Pacific. Marines landed on Peleliu Island on September 15 while Army units landed on Angur on the 17th. These were the two southernmost islands of the Palau group. Opposition on Anguar was relatively light. Much stiffer resistance was met on Peleliu which contained the site of the major Japanese airfield on the islands. The troops succeeded by October 12 in pushing the enemy into a small area in the central hills of Peleliu. But many more weeks were spent in destroying the remaining opposition.

During the fighting in the southern Palaus, Ulithi Atoll in the western Carolines was taken to secure a naval anchorage in the western Pacific. Air attacks against bypassed islands were maintained. Meanwhile, huge air bases were being developed in the Marianas for use by B-29 bombers. On November 24, B-29's operating from Saipan made the first of a series of attacks on Tokyo.

Concurrent with the operations in the Marshalls, Marianas, Palaus, and Carolines, forces of the Southwest Pacific Area moved swiftly along the northern coast of New Guinea. They jumped to Vogelkop Peninsula, and then to Morotai and into the Philippines. The first amphibious advance of 1944 in this area was made on January 2 at Sidor to capture the airport there. The next major advance was begun early on the morning of February 29 when a landing was effected on Los Negros in the Admiralty Islands.

The Japanese sent reinforcements from Manus Island, separated from Los Negros by only 100 yards of water. Except for isolated groups of enemy troops, Los Negros was cleared on the 23rd. And Momote airfield on the east coast was ready for operation. Manus Island was invaded on March 15. After the seizure of a few smaller islands an airfield was captured the next day. At the end of April most of the enemy had been cleared from the Admiralties.

In New Britain the beachheads established in 1943 were expanded. On March 6 another landing took place on Willaumez Peninsula on the north coast. This operation, together with the establishment of airfields in the Admiralties and the occupation of Green and Emirau Islands, completed the encirclement and neutralization of Rabaul, the once powerful Japanese base. On November 26, U.S. units left New Britain. The enemy was being contained on the Gazelle Peninsula by the Australians.

In New Guinea, after the Sidor operation the enemy organized his defences in the coastal area between Wewak and Madang. Surprise landings by U.S. troops were made at Aitape and Hollandia, both west of Wewak on April 22. Within five days the airfields at Hollandia and Aitape were in Allied possession. In July 1944, the Japanese Army which had moved up the coast from Wewak, attacked the allied perimeter at Aitape. Within a month the Japanese had been thrown back toward Wewak. At the end of the year, Australian troops, which had begun relieving U.S. forces at Aitape in October, started a drive on Wewak from the west. While the enemy was bottled up in this area, the Allies continued to leapfrog up the New Guinea coast.

On May 17, forces debarked at Arare, 125 miles northwest of Hollandia, and established a strong beachhead. Wade Island, just offshore, was assaulted the next day and secured by the 19th. Other units assaulted the island of Biak on May 27 to seize additional air base sites. Here considerable resistance was met. The islands with its air field was not secured until August. Noemfoor Island, where airfields were located, was invaded in July by troops which landed at points where reefs made invasion hazardous. The Noemfoor airstrips were captured by night of the 6th. The last landing on New Guinea was an unopposed one made on July 30 in the Cape Sansapor area. The Japanese in New Guinea had been eliminated from the war.

Another air base site on the southern tip of Morotai Island, northwest of the Vogelkop Peninsula was seized on September 15 at slight cost. The invasion of Morotai, lying between New Guinea and the Philippines, was the last major operation undertaken by Southwest forces before the attack on the Philippines in October. Prior to the invasion of the Philippines, a seven day air attack, beginning on October 10, was undertaken against enemy bases on the Ryukyu Islands, Formosa, and Luzon. On October 17, Suluan, Homonhon, and Dinagat Islands, guarding Leyte Gulf where the main invasion was to be made, were captured.

Despite all this activity, strategic surprise proved complete when on October 20, 1944, the assault forces landed on Leyte. Heavy opposition was encountered on only one of the many beaches. Throughout the entire campaign, opposition at all times was fierce, although it came from relatively small units or from separate defensive positions. The enemy made every effort to hold Leyte. But we smashed through and by December 26, Leyte was declared secured, but mopping-up against strong resistance continued for several months.

We were on our way back. Our first taste of defeat had been as the result of a treacherous attack. Now with the full force and fury of the American Productive Capacity, plus our Armed Might, we were going to win. And nothing was to stop us!
